Hi Guys!

Sorry I missed the last general meeting but I heard you guys were busy with cleaning tack and decorating horseshoes for the drill team. Great Job. We've even been requested to have a tack cleaning night again! I apologize to Kaleigh for last months newsletter.
Her submission was left out, so I added it below.

We will be getting busy with our plans for the fashion show! To be held in July. We will be modeling fashions from Go West, Champ at the Bit and East Coast Show Apparel We will also have accessories from Diamante Jewelers and The Two Louises.

I will also be contacting you for a trail ride date! See you soon!

Have fun!

Loretta

Hi everybody now that we're out of the snow and cold (hopefully), its time to get back into the normal riding routine. It's time to dig out all your riding clothes and dust off your tack. For me I have to get back my riding muscle. So hopefully everyone has a good start to spring (aka shedding season) and happy riding!

The horse world is dreadfully guilty of political incorrectness. Citizens, we can fix this!

From now on, the rider who came in 128th out of 127 competitors isn't a major loser; he's ribbon-deprived.

We'll refer to awful jumpers as potential dressage horses and horrid dressage horses will be called event prospects (oh, wait, we've been doing that for years anyway).

Judges who make stupid decisions are myopically magnificent.

A twitch is a lip tourniquet.

Instructors, refrain from telling any student that she has a bad seat. Instead, tell this rider that she has astronomical potential for butt improvement.

A horse that always crashes through the jumps is merely in touch with his personal sense of gravity. Likewise, a bad mover isn't an eggbeater with legs --- he's kinetically challenged.

A horse who won't go forward is a whoa-overachiever.

Waterlogged showgrounds are humidity super-enriched.
